

Regarding the suggested rule making change, WHAN is a stand-alone station in a market with a majority of multi-station owners. We are actively aware of the community standards of our area and work intensively to address public concerns. However, we are not the leading advertising source and thus our revenues are limited. So limited, in fact, that the owner takes no salary, commission or bonus of any sort. The addition of a system that would require us to record 66% of our broadcast time and maintain that file for 60-90 days would necessitate several thousand dollars in investment - something we just don't have. For those stations who have been mindful of their community responsibility and who are being decimated by the sponging of market resources now allowed to the large media conglomerates, it is unseemly for the FCC to require those remaining small community stations to shoulder the burden of monitoring an issue for which they are not a part. We strongly implore the FCC to vacate this proposed rule making.
